Interesting!!!

„The horse of Alexander the Great, Bucephalus, became sick after drinking the ice cold water from the Iskanderkul Lake. Unable to wait, Alexander, arranged for the horse to be cared and moved on with his troops. Although the health of Bucephalus improved, it refused to move from the lakeside. One morning, the horse reared up, neighed and plunged forever into the depth of the lake. Now, at full moon, his name can be seen racing across the waters of the lake.... „
